BOOK SYNOPSIS

Veterinarian Tristan Maitland lives a quiet life with his son Zach in Laramie, Wyoming, close to his family ranch. He made peace with his two brothers and the father that had adopted him when he was four years old, and moved into a great house together with his son Zach and their household of assorted animals. His life becomes complicated when Zach's mother, who left when the child was born, comes to town to get custody of him. Meanwhile, Tristan's own attempt to find his biological father has an unexpected outcome. Difficulties at work and a break up with her fiancé make Eleanor Jackson, district attorney in New York City, put her career on hold and cancel the wedding. She drives to Laramie, Wyoming for her sister Annie's wedding. Here, she meets the brother of the groom, a veterinarian doctor and the instant physical attraction they both feel is very strong, a complication Eleanor doesn't need. Can this feeling lead to the same all-encompassing, overpowering love that shines in her sister's eyes?
